title II

highereducationact

Under Title II of the Higher Education Act, teacher preparation providers, including institutions of higher education (IHEs) that conduct teacher preparation programs and state-approved teacher preparation programs operating outside of IHEs, must annually collect and submit information to their respective states. States, in turn, submit annual report cards on teacher preparation and credentialing to the U.S. Department of Education.

Unless otherwise noted, the data in this booklet reflect AY 2012-13 data reported through Title II HEA by all 50 states, the District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Northern Mariana Islands, Palau, Puerto Rico, and Virgin Islands. Hello! I'm Sarah.
I am about to start down a pathway to teaching.

First, I will need to decide which type of teacher preparation program I will attend. What do I need to know?

Traditional programs are typically four-year undergraduate programs and often attract individuals who enter college with the goal of becoming a teacher. Traditional programs prepare candidates with instruction in pedagogy as well as the specific content area they plan to teach.

Alternative programs often attract individuals who already hold a bachelor's degree in a specific content area and may have prior work experience but are seeking to switch careers. Alternative programs often focus less on a specific content area and more on pedagogy.

Supervised Clinical Experience Requirements

In most traditional programs, candidates must complete 100 hours of supervised clinical experience prior to student teaching and 600 hours of student teaching.

Most alternative teacher preparation programs primarily serve candidates who begin teaching while participating in the program. Alternative teacher preparation program candidates may engage in a form of mentoring or induction support as a part of the program instead of a prescribed number of hours.

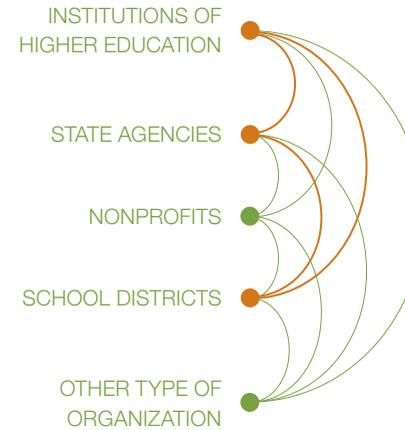

I will also need to decide where to attend my teacher preparation program.

Top 5 Teacher-Producing States

Organizations That Administer Alternative Routes

Nearly all states offer alternative routes to a teaching credential. Alternative routes can be administered by different types of organizations, such as nonprofit organizations or state education agencies, or by various partnerships.

For Example

Some school districts partner with IHEs to offer an alternative program that allows participants to begin an internship or probationary teaching position within the school district while taking courses towards program completion at the IHE. States approve the types of alternative routes that may operate in their states, so the types of alternative routes available vary by state.
